

MORE NEWS FROM THE MIDDLE EAST.

News flashes from the war fronts in the Middle East. We'll make a start with a few lorry loads of Bosche who were captured during a bit of a set-to around Sollum. Hitler's gun-fodder are an ("don't do that please") arrogant lot of blackguards and unless they behave themselves they'll get a kick in the pants from one of the Aussies. And to show that conditions in the desert are far from pleasant, this is how a sand-storm deals with what was once an Italian hospital Tent Section. But you ought to see it when it really blows. Round about the same district barrels of tar are sent up in flames because the Weps want to pinch it to build another road or something. Nothing much there but a lot of black smoke, so let's pop intenan R.A.F. aerodrome in Transjordan, where King Peter of Yugoslavia. with General Simonvitch, is inspecting some of his men who are carrying on the fight for their homeland. Men of the Transjordan Frontier Force parade before the young King who refused to see his country become a vassal state.

Now with Syria very much in the news, here are Free Frenchmen who are fighting in the campaign in the Middle East to save their motherland and Empire overseas from traitors and tyrants alike. The real French poilu (which being translated means "the bearded one", is still fighting.

Also giving a splendid account of themselves are the Sengelese, Big feller and tiny tich are tigers when they're roused.

Now to Cairo where Captain Roosevelt, son of the American President, is a welcome guest at British G.H.Q. Symbolic of America's attitude to Germany, Captain Roosevelt watches the effect of a burst of fire from the guns of an American Tomahawk. The son of a great man is sure of a big welcome in Britain.
