

ITALIAN PRISONERS... DOWN UNDER.

With Musso's military gear box stuck in reverse, thousands of his troops finish their high speed retreat down the gangplank of a troopship in Australia. As they head for a Commonwealth internment Camp, each man is issued with an army great coat dyed red, and a tin pannikin.

None of the prisoners claims to be Fascists; An Italian Officer described them as King's men. O-Kay King's men, but you're just a lot of Blackshirts to us. Anyway, they'll have plenty of time behind barbed wire to think the whole thing over. Maybe they'll discover they belong to the Sussies for the duration.
