

INVENTORS COUNCIL

America's men of science sit around the table in Washington to compare notes and invent things. They are members of the National Inventors Council. New types of guns, tanks and planes are the greater part of the 40,000 inventions already submitted. A model land bastion goes into action and a good time is had by all.