

AIRACERAS.

We find pleasure in presenting these, the first, pictures of the most unorthodox fighter planes in the world, the American Airaceras. They are remarkable machines in every way and appear to be solid from prop to tail.

The engine (An American Allison of eleven-hundred-and fifty horse-power) is behind the pilot, driving the airerow through a hollow shaft - Through the shaft a shell-firing cannon takes its nose. The machine guns in the nose and four more in the wings complete the Airaceras formidable armament!

These unique aircraft have quite a lot that none of the others haven't got. For instance, over the Messerschmitt 109 she has greater speed, better maneuverability, more fire power and clearer view for the pilot.

The Americans call them "bush-busters"; we prefer Magi -busters for they'll knock the stuffing out of the Germans wherever they find 'em.
