REMEMBRANCE DAY POPPIES

We break into our review of the news to express the hope that you will buy at least one of the poppies, made by men wounded in the last and the present wars, to commemorate Remembrance Day.

Although, at the request of the King, the usual Cenotaph and other big ceremonies are not to be held this year, the Earl Haig fund needs, more than ever, every penny it can get, to enable it to keep up the good work of caring for disabled ex-service men of the two biggest wars in history. So please give generously for your poppy.
