KING AND QUEEN VISIT SOUTH WALES.

For two days the King and Queen tour the Industrial centres of South Wales. Its another story of royal concern for the welfare of the men, women and children of that brave corner of Britain. Wives of miners and factory workers tell their troubles to the Queen, while other women in overalls give voice to their loyal feelings.

Among the places visited are nursery schools and welfare centres for the comfort and convenience of families and work people. Pressing round the royal car is a crowd of stout hearted people, who's livelihood and happiness is a matter of National responsibility.

On arrival at a colliery, the Queen is presented with a bouquet of flowers by a little Welsh lass, while a miniature Miners-lamp beautifully executed in silver, is handed to the King as a memento of the visit.

At a pit-head miners are waiting eagerly for a word with two good friends, who really appreciate ~~xxix~~ the lot of the men who work deep below the surface of the earth.

The job these men are doing is not just a very important war job - its their living. Today is a happy occasion in the dail routine of their hard lives.
