Commentary;
 The Ministry of Food has opened Food Advice Centres all over the country. More are being set up. Their advice is free, whether you want to know about buying food or cooking it. Some food advice centres handle 2,000 questions a week. There are food advisors in market places and food advisors in the street. They'll give you all the help you care to ask for. The people who work at the food advice centres will advise you how best to use the food you buy and all the things you grow for yourself. In some places food advisors will help you with your shopping so that you can buy the best cheaply. If you ask them they will come back to your kitchen and suggest new appetizing dishes. This way everyone will make sure that their war time meals are as healthy and economical as possible. Friendly ~~with~~ advice leads to better food, better health and greater energy. Make use of your food advice centre, it's there to help you. Ask at your local food office for information.
