DISCOVERY BELOW.

A discovery of great interest to geologists comes to light with the evacuation of the old Marlin Caves in Montana. The limestone rocks, several feet below are unmistakable evidence of human habitation. Experts say it is certain anyway that human hands have shaped what appear to be the wall of an underground room. Beautifully fashioned stalagmites and stalagmites have been un-earthed in these operations which when finished will probably fill in a missing chapter on the stone age. This discovery below has set historian and geologists a knotty problem. They'll be going further into the distant past in the near future.
