

2-180000
PATHE GAZETTE 42 - 23. DUBLIN.

WOMEN AT WORK.

More women are coming into industry every day and much more varied are their jobs. Indeed today women are tackling jobs that would have been impossible a few years ago. Women crane drivers are a new departure and they justify themselves in similar duties that need great care and judgement. Women are taking to shipbuilding as the ships they help to build take to water, and you can see they've got push. Girl riveters are fast becoming as skilful as the men, maybe it's because riveting has to be done in the heat of the moment. Is it the ship bit in courtship that attracts them? no it's the tea in afternoon. It might be said of course that women are more used to painting, but not this sort of painting. They are painting a railway bridge so that the crossing will be clean and bright, not to say gay. They told our cameraman very wittily that that was their express purpose. As you can see they have risen to great heights already, brush in pan and pot in reserve. If they feel like a smoke. They're giving that old bridge a new coat so that they can buy themselves a new one.