MALTA TODAY.

The most-bombed Island in the world - Malta (G.C) gives daily proof of the staunchness of the lion-hearted people there.

Even the kiddies go to school just as if their classrooms had roofs over them, and there were no such things as enemy raiders to interrult their lessons. At St. Andrews the hundred and thirty little pupils often have to leave their desks as the sirens wail, and seek refuge in one of the shelters

However, they are soon back getting the most out of life as only youngsters can. Just around the corner the more serious side of life on the Island is in full swing. Here, some of the gallant defenders are on the alert for enemy parachutists. Any invader foolish enough to set foot on Malta by air will get a very hot reception. If any of you are feeling that you are having a tough time here at home, just give a thought to the life of the people of Malta!
