ROYAL TOUR.

In the course of a comprehensive tour, Their Majesties watched the testing of aircraft fresh from the factory, much to the delight of the thousands of work people engaged on the job. They were loth to see the King and Queen go, but the Royal programme was a heavy one.

At every place it was the same story. Workpeople glad to welcome Their Majesties. A very young subject expressed her loyalty in a way which rather embarrassed her mother, but amused the Queen.

Later, Their Majesties visited Boscobel, to see the famous Oak Tree in which Charles the Second hid after his defeat at Worcester in 1651.

After numerous other calls, a visit to Lichfield Cathedral rounded off another Royal Tour which brought good cheer to thousands of loyal Britons in North Wales and the Midlands.
