The Cumberland Agricultural Society has revived its famous horse show and to Carlisle come blue blooded Clydesdales from far and wide. 109 of them in a grand entry, and thereby hangs a tail. The reduction in the petrol supplies for mechanical vehicles has given an impetus to the breeding of good quality horses and the Carlisle show provides the extra fillip of competition. Breeders will at least have a good run for their money. There are Classes for three year old geldings and mares, two year olds and yearling geldings and fillies. It's a show of dark horses and none of them has been in open competition since 1938. The winning head of a winner. The champion of the show Laraby Princess, pride of the Clydesdale clan.
