W.A.A.C.S. on THE WAGON

In Baltimore the WAAGs are on the wagon, or will be in a moment. Members of the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps. are learning to drive trucks, and the course of an army truck, like true love, doesn't run smooth. When they've mastered country like this they can get a truck through anywhere. And goodbye then to the old jibe about women drivers. No so good for the springs but a bit of alright for the liver. Streamlining doesn't matter so much, it's stream negotiating that counts, especially when the stream covers the tyres.
