RICHHELIEU'S CREW IN NEW YORK.

Through the concrete canyons of New York's streets march a thousand French sailors from the battleship RICHHELIEU and the cruiser MONTCALM. A ceremonial parade which follows the dramatic voyage from Dakar of the great warship and other French Naval units. Marching in line with the Frenchmen are contingents of American and British Navy men. It's like old times to see the three allies marching together again.

Mayor La Guardia and high ranking officers of the Allied Navies stand outside City Hall for the review.

New York gives a great welcome to the visitors who take time off... while their ships are refitting in Brooklyn Navy Yard, to display their pride at being back again in the United Nation's fold.
