

5-550000
PATHE GAZETTE: 43/29. (DUBLIN)

RED CROSS REALISM

Medical Corps. men are being subjected to as tough a training as the combatants corps. and here they are learning to carry one under fire. In mock air raids, stretcher bearers go to it. While the wounded are being brought back to a field dressing station there comes a warning - Gas. Men put on their respirators and get on with the job. Training is aimed at making the Red Cross men able to stand up to the toughest conditions. Medical Corps. pays a large part in active service and battle practice helps keep its members fit and fearless.