TITLE.:- ATLANTIC FLOWN AGAIN.

Picture. "Miss Columbia" made history in more ways than one. These pictures of the last minutes before she hopped off on her trans-Atlantic flight were brought to England by the pilot Captain J. Erroll Boyd. The fastest film transport since the world began !

Here fuel is being taken aboard the plane while Captain Boyd gives her a last look-over --

--and discusses plans for the flight with his navigator-companion Lieutenant Connor.

Boyd is a Canadian and served in the Royal Naval Air Service in the War.

Immediately after these 'shots' were taken the film was hurriedly packed by our cameraman and handed to the airmen --

--who brought it by air to Croydon --

--where they arrived safely after a forced landing in the Scilly Isles.

Mr. Levine, who flew the Atlantic in the same plane three years ago, is first to greet the flyers --

--who look little the worse for their 2600 miles air trip from Newfoundland to Croydon in less than two days.

A very fine flight. Well done ! and thanks for bringing our film over with you.

TITLE.:- GRAPE HARVEST.

Picture.:- Here's something to make you smack your lips ! Miles and miles of -- --luscious grapes all ready to be picked.

It's wine harvest time, and peasants are hard at work picking the fruit from the vine --

--and incidentally making our mouths water.

The grapes are treated more tenderly than we thought anything was treated in Russia in these days of her history

The fruit is very carefully packed, and --

--oh ! I wish that label had my address on it.
