(2). TITLE.:- INDIAN CONFERENCE.

Picture.:- Famous men from West and East attend this inauguration of a conference--

--affecting the destiny of three-hundred-odd-million subjects of the Indian Empire.

The Indian delegates hasten through the November mist to be in their appointed places before the King-Emperor arrives --

--to open the most important conference in the history of India itself, and the whole of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Mr. Ramsay Macdonald arrives early at the -- --House of Lords, with that famous Indian sportsman, the Aga Khan not very far behind him.

Many of the visiting Indian potentates are rulers over millions of subjects and vast territories in India.

Mr. Lloyd George pauses a moment for our benefit.

Then comes the King Emperor to open the Round Table Conference with impressive and inspiring words of encouragement to the assembly of great and brilliant statesmen.

Here is the Maharajah of Patiala ruler over the powerful Punjab state.

They don't like our climate. When judged by a November day, you can't blame them.

May their deliberations result in good, and nothing but good, for India and the Empire.
