THE ARMY OF TO-DAY - Privileged visit to the camp of the 9th Queens' Royal Lancers, at Stobs.

-Scotland-

Picture.:- Well, they couldn't have better weather for it! Men of the 9th Queens' Royal Lancers take-- --the Scottish sun in camp at Stobs. Horses and men thoroughly enjoy the change--

--from tar paved roads to sweet smelling turf. Troops empty--

--their straw beds for airing, but during the process, a slight scrap develops. Reminiscent of the pillow fight, but it's far too hot to keep that up!

And Bathing parade comes as a welcome break on a hot day!

All ready? Go! By the race they're putting up somebody must have a wet canteen bet on the result!
Pretty good effort!

The Cock House call ends all that, and the-- --next race is for tea. Since being in camp a jackdaw has joined the regiment. It's there somewhere, I'm sure! It never misses meal times. Of course a soldiers' camp isn't all fun! They do work some times! But who wants to be reminded of work?
