Picture: Ancient Exeter, the sedate city of the West of England, breaks out--

--into colour and movement. It is invaded by no less than twentyone mayors and their mace-bearers and numerous other--

--important visitors. The reason is historic. Eight hundred years ago, Exeter's--

--Cathedral was built and consecrated and this consecration is being commemorated today--

--and during the coming festival week. The procession is now entering the--

--Cathedral for a special citizen service, taken by the--

--Lord Bishop of Liverpool. The message of his Lordship was that we must hasten the humanization of humanity to save Christian civilization from collapse.

A memorable message on an occasion which cannot repeat itself--

--for another one hundred years. Exeter Cathedral writes still more history in its ancient and venerable book of years !
