

25551

A SPLENDID FAILURE - - The Mellisons.

Amy and Jim, succeed in flying the Atlantic, only to meet with disaster 40 miles from New York.

-Pendine-

---

Picture.:- A better weather report - - a rush journey to Pendine -

--Sands - - hurried but careful loading--

--up of necessities and Jim and Amy dared to embark--

--on yet another great and grave adventure. They have started--

--a fashion in husbands and wives journeying by air to visit Broadway--

--shops and Fifth Avenue shops. They took--

--the hazard in the hope that future flying developments might--

--the sooner profit by their experience. If successful, they knew they must--

--travel some three-thousand-five hundred miles before they can leave their machine again. Cables 36 hours later--

--told us they had crashed just before reaching New York. Everyone who admires courage and endurance is sincere in his or her thankfulness that these two brave pioneers escaped with their lives. Every Britisher rejoices in their heroism.