

W I N T E R      A I D S      L U M B E R
M E N

SNOW-TRACKS FOR LOGS
NATURAL SLIDES DOWN THE ALPS.

---

Picture :-

In the summer lumbermen of the Bavarian Alps hew down the tall fire trees. In the winter they get easy transport for their logs, but it's a dangerous job. If a bump causes the logs to shift they have a nasty trick of running over the guide and flattening him out. The horses complete the work of piling the wood before it is used for furniture floors or firing or fooling about with. The only "snag" in the transport idea is that they have got to haul the sled back.

---oO---