

INTERNATIONAL FOOTBALL.

DUTCH VISITORS' VICTORY.

Picture.:- Football gets more international than ever. The Dutch team comes out at Tufnell Park,--

--followed by the English side, the Corinthians, chosen to battle against them. Before kicking off--

--Sir Frederick Wall, representing English association football, shakes hands with the visitors, and wishes--

--them luck, and also the Corinthians.

The whistle goes, and they're off ! The Corinthians begin the attack--

--quite hopefully and nearly successfully, but not quite !

Then the Dutch side commences to show the Englishmen how to play football. The excellent team-work soon results in the ball being netted, neatly, cleanly, and without fuss. The passing of the visitors is almost--

--faultless. The players work--

--together with the evenness of a machine, but a machine--

--which speedily adapts itself to lightning changes. Nottage, the English centre-forward is injured, and the Dutch--

--introduce a new--

--sporting practice in England by allowing a substitute to take his place. The technique of the Dutch attack--

--is a lesson to any home team may take to heart. Another goal is chalked up, and--

--several men picked up. The Dutch are wonderful sportsmen. There--

--was not a foul in this match. At the dinner after--

--the match they refused to take the guarantee--

--of their expenses, and they beat us by six goals to nil !
