

FELINE FAVOURITES.
PARISIAN PETS ON SHOW.

Picture.:- The opening of a basketful of cat--

--for the opening of a Feline Exhibition at Paris.

The show is in aid of French soldiers blinded in the war.

Hundreds of exclusive pussies are presented for public--
--view in a good cause, and lovely cats--

--they are, too. Beautiful, soft, purring, pleasing creatures, providing, of course, one treats--

--them with caution and kindness. Some of them--

--probably have a warning look in their eyes. They simply--

--hate being wrenched away from the familiar fireside. Some hate--

--strong lights. Still, like humans clever petting subdues their impatience.

Black versus white. White is running favourite at the moment. No, ladies prefer brunettes, apparently. Oh to be-- --a cat. Well, I don't know, and the cat is rather doubtful too. The thing cats hate most, however, is--

--being judged. They don't mind being mauled sympathetically, but--

--not for judging purposes. Afterwards sympathy--

--is freely given and taken. That's the one sort of licking he doesn't get sore about.

A cat's and dog's life are--

--rather different. Grammar sounds--

--weak, but it is correct. At New Hampshire--

--winter and snow----

--brings work for the huskies, and podgy puppies learn--

--from their hardy, lean parents. The Alaskan dogs life is one of-- --hard labour. Having observed--

--the lesson, the pups roll out of their quarters--

--and get into harness. A wooden block is attached to represent a --

--sled, but the pup thinks this work is play.

Hello ! The dinner bell's gone!
