

ROYAL NATIONAL EISTEDDFOD.
HIGH COURT OF WELSH BARDISM.

Picture.

With the grim scarred walls of Caernarvon Castle as a background, the Welsh National Eisteddfod commences. For the past week Welshmen, from all corners of the earth, have streamed back to their native soil to be present within the mystic bardic circle of the Gorsedd. The drama is re-enacted.

Raising the ancient Welsh sword, the Arch-Druid asks "Have Ye peace in your Hearts?" And the answer rumbles over the gathering "It is peace."

A reference to historic troubles which did not always end so harmoniously.

To-day the Eisteddfod upholds national culture, the art, and the true tongue of Ancient Wales.

Inspired by their history and tradition, the feet of Welsh youth wear paths to progress and enlightenment.