(A) Picture.:- This ship has been launched first, and named afterwards. The ceremony is performed by (crash), performed by Lady Linlithgow, wife of the new Viceroy of India. After the little grandson of Mr. Henry Robb, the ship-builder, has presented Lady Linlithgow with a bouquet, the party goes aboard the St. Anthony.

The ship is a luxury vessel, built for coastal passenger service from Bombay. So Lady Linlithgow's christening of the vessel is particularly appropriate. And now we go from luxury

(B) to starvation. The heavy snow-fall on the Scottish borders has compelled the starving deer to come down to the valleys in search of food. They are usually very timid, but privation makes the suffering animals quite tame, and dwellers in the valley farms actually call them by name. I think that one must be Gertie the Greedy.

When the weather becomes less cruel, the call of the hills will again make them shy from the haunts of man and shot guns.

(C) Picture.:- Liverpool's unemployed seamen attend classes to fit them for manning lifeboats.

Here are some studying the breeches buoy method of rescue. We find others sending practice signals and going all through the difficult business of rescue and first aid-treatment.

Although there are, it is said, thirty-thousand seamen unemployed, there is a shortage of men able and qualified to man a lifeboat, and apply emergency treatment. These classes are designed to train
men for that work,
and any such effort deserves full measure of success.
