RUGBY CHAMPIONSHIP

WALES v. IRELAND
at Cardiff.

Sixty thousand people are said to be here at Cardiff, watching the Irish team come out for their International Rugby ~~xxxxx~~ Championship match against Wales. If Ireland wins, they gain the triple crown. They have already beaten England and Scotland. The crowd gives them a great ovation at the start of the match and enthusiasm runs high. Wales heels out of the first scrum but gains little advantage. Cliff Jones plays a great game and is the first to reach the Irish twenty five line. The visitors defence is very sound and the tackling is fierce. Halfway through the first half, Ireland is penalised, and Jenkins puts over a fine goal from a difficult position. EFFECTS.

Wales misses a great chance to increase. McCall waits a second too long, and O'Connor ~~xxx~~ outwits him cleverly. Cliff Jones makes a wonderful sprint, but is brought down by a fine tackle from Hewitt.

Neither side scored again, and Ireland lost the triple crown by three points to nil. Bravo Wales.
