

In New York, Carl Bobo Olsen --- in the light trunks with the dark stripe --- went after the world lighthweight title held by Archie Moore. Olsen was knocked down in Round 3.

After being counted out, he still wanted to go after Moore; but Moore wanted to go after Marciano.

At Longchamp --- amid the blaze of ~~French~~ sunshine and French fashion --- Phil Drake, No. 17, set the seal on his win in the Epsom Derby by walking away with the Paris Grand Prix.

Phil Drake's owner, of course, is Mme. Suzy Volterra --- and as the brilliant three-year-old came in to the unsaddling enclosure, Madame was receiving the congratulations of President Coty.

For summer racing in England --- we take you to Newcastle to watch the Northumberland Plate --- locally known as the Pitmen's Derby.

In this race also, the winner came up in a flashing burst on the outside to win in style for Sir Victor Sassoon. The winner was --- Little Cloud.

And it was another triumph for Lester Piggott.

Now to Henley --- and a welcome for the crews from Soviet Russia, back on the Thames after their brilliant showing in the Regatta of ~~1953~~ 1954. Unfortunately, this trial spin had to be made in borrowed boats; owing to the dock strike --- their own boats were at the wrong end of the right river.

Finally --- a further glimpse of Wimbledon, as Drobny and Trabert --- watched by the Duchess of Kent from the Royal Box --- came out to settle who beats who in the closing stages of the Men's Singles.

Drobny serving.

But America's Tony Trabert --- facing the camera --- scored match point to beat the holder of last year's title.

This was the day when the British women's chances disappeared with Angela Buxton defeated by Mrs Fleitz of America; and Miss Middleton and Miss Spiers going down to Miss Muller and Mrs Hoad.
