

Cycle Race- The eighth and final stage of the Tour of Britain is on, as racing cyclists speed towards London- their final goal.

900 gruelling miles lie behind them and there's not much time to make up leeway. Hampstead Heath is the finish- and first home is Douglas Booker of Sale Moor, near Manchester.

But it's an amateur who is the overall winner- Tony Hewson of Sheffield.

King Faisal- Arriving at Ferryfield airport, Kent, was King Faisal of Iraq, for a six-week private stay in Britain.

And the young Momatch brought with him three luxurious cars from the Continent. While over here, this Eastern Ruler with Western ideas, who is always a welcome visitor, will stay at a country house near Staines.

Russians leave Austria- Before leaving Baden, Russian ~~troops~~ ^{soldiers} entertained their friends, made during the occupation of Austria, with some lively country dancing.

Nearly $\frac{3}{4}$ of the Russian Garrison have now been withdrawn under the terms of the Austrian Treaty. And it's good to see that occupation troops can leave a host of friends behind them.

Fire- The worst industrial fire for over 20 years called out a third of Chicago's brigade- to fight a blaze that engulfed four factories in a roaring inferno.

High tension wires were a constant menace to the 400 firemen in a conflagration that injured 39 people, and caused $2\frac{1}{2}$ million dollar's worth of damage.
