

DUBLIN HORSE SHOW.

10/8/56.

Focus of attention in the horse-show world which is becoming increasingly popular, moves to the showgrounds at Balls bridge; it's the international show organised by the Royal Dublin Society. Competitors had come from many distant lands --- including countries as far off as America, Australia and New Zealand. But, first of all, a home ~~combination~~ combination in Ireland's Lieutenant Barry and Ballyneety

An American representative was William Steinkraus on Night Owl... who did so well in London

From England, Colonel ^{Llewellyn} on Aherlow --- but they collected four faults.

It was Colonel Llewellyn on the famous veteran Foxhunter whose clear round meant a jump-off against the clock.

The winner was Brazil's Nelson ^{PASS OF} ~~Basso~~, riding Relincho --- who beat gallant old Foxhunter by just one ^{1/10th of a} second.
