

Hundreds of exhibitors from ^{ENGLAND} home and scores from overseas drew the crowds to the Food Fair at Olympia, London --- and many of those who tasted snacks at every stand ^{SOON FOUND THEY'D HAD ENOUGH} (thought they'd overdone ~~it when they saw the harp~~ but that) was the symbol of Ireland. ^{AMONGST EXHIBITS OF MANY LANDS} It's one of the few shows in the world where the owners of the good things are dying to give them away --- and all free. It is sponsored by the Daily Express.

The Food Fair gives ~~the manufacturer~~ the manufacturer a guide to what the public likes best; and the ~~the~~ eating public gets new ideas for a spread --- even if it's only a premature middle-age spread.

RUSSIAN ATHLETES.

This healthy-looking group of young people, arriving at Brighton, is not just another bunch of holidaymakers in search of a summer. They're members of the Russian International Athletics Team --- including some selections for the Olympic Games. In the Sports Arena at Withdean --- here's a little huddling practice from Ilyin Igor.

And the lady practising throwing the javelin is B Virve Roolaid. But this was not a serious practise --- so she didn't have a javelin.

DEAUVILLE GRAND PRIX.

A large crowd on a famous French racecourse watched a close-finish defeat, for the runner up in the Epsom Derby. Montaval was favourite for the Deauville Grand Prix --- but now watch how Charlie Smirke, riding the Aga Khan's Tall Chief, comes up to win in a photo finish.

It's Montaval on the rails; --- and Tall Chief, nearer the camera, just ~~win~~ beats him.
