Dior fashions

11th September 56

Though women have ceased to be surprised by the creations of Christian Dior - his new London collection has started ^{what might be called} controversy at "long-length" - even if this black ^{VELVET} cocktail dress and jacket are....almost in classic mould.

It's a winter mid-season collection (so naturally party gowns are well represented). This new offering features the "Magnet" line - with many skirts of ankle length.

A strapless cocktail dress in the new shade of rose red - with a matching long-sleeve jacket. ~~_____~~

~~Well, do you like it?~~

Grey, it seems, will be fashionable for evening wear, and this lovely gown is further enriched by a white satin sash. ☺

~~_____~~, too, will brighten those darker days. A deep mauve velvet evening gown with a lilac sash, ~~ILLUSTRATES THE NEW ANKLE-LENGTH. HOW DO YOU LIKE IT? IS~~
Aptly named "Opera" - this pale lilac gown has a ruched back panel - and is adorned with bows. ☺

So the great dictator of fashion has decreed a "longer line"? Will the modern woman return to grandma's style? If so, ^{try to} imagine a teenager doing the rock and roll in a hobble skirt! /
