

SPANISH BATTLE OF FLOWERS.

7/5/57.

When spring comes to Murcia --- in the south-east of Spain --- they celebrate with a battle of flowers. This year fourteen floats were laden with thousands of lovely blooms and also some lovely señoritas. People came from miles around to join in the innocent fun. Even our cameraman joined in; at the time he didn't realise it was ^{going to be} innocent.

SALT HARVEST.

One of the strangest jobs in the world is this gathering of a harvest from pools on the coast of Colombia. The sea water is evaporated by sun so fierce that the ^{Indians} ~~Indians~~ paint their faces as protection from it. The salt left behind from the burnt-up pools gives them their living. It takes ten months of the year for the sun to do its job --- leaving two months for the Indians to do theirs.

ARCHIE MOORE WINS.

A vast crowd at Essen in Germany watched this ten-round bout between German heavyweight Hans Kalbfell and world light heavyweight champion Archie Moore --- when a kidney punch sent the German down for ~~XXXXXXXXXX~~ the first count. A short while later Moore sent him down again.

After this battle, Archie Moore signed up to defend his world title --- taking this contest on the way with a victory on points.

QUEEN JULIANA'S BIRTHDAY.

An annual celebration in Holland has this year acquired a greater significance. It's the occasion of the birthday of Queen Juliana; and loyal demonstrations took place all ^{OVER} ~~along the route at~~ the Hague, ~~at the~~ ~~traditional birthday drive.~~ With recent memories of upheavals in the royal household of the Netherlands --- Holland was determined to show its affection for the Queen, both to her and to the world.
